CARNERA
WINSUZCUDUN
LOSES 14 OF
15 ROUNDSPrimo Fights With
Fractured Right.LOSER DISPLAYS COURAGE OF SPANISH BULL

Rome, To-day.

In spite of the fact that he fought with a fractured right hand Primo Carnera, the giant Italian, retained his world's heavyweight boxing title yesterday at the Piazza Disena when he clearly outpointed Paolino Uzcudun, the Basque wood-chopper, over fifteen rounds.

A crowd of 50,000, which included Signor Mussolini, the Italian Dictator, and Sir Ronald Graham, the British Ambassador, witnessed the contest which was staged under flood-lights and which was postponed for two hours.

Uzcudun fought with the courage of a Spanish bull and took punishment in the early rounds which would have knocked out a less courageous fighter.

For sheer pluck he took the honors of the fight. He fully deserved the applause which greeted the referee's only possible verdict.

Carnera won every round with the exception of the tenth which was declared even. Uzcudun's eye-brow was opened by a left in the fifth round.

Mussolini watched every movement of the fight with the greatest interest. He was delighted that Carnera decided to defend his title in Rome instead of in America in London.

Before the fight Max Schmeling, the former world champion, was introduced from the ring. He shook hands with both men.

Carnera won the title when he knocked out Jack Sharkey, the Boston Gob, in six rounds, and this is his first defence of the title. It was Sharkey who robbed Schmeling of the title.—Reuter.

Sydney.—A "brighten-up" campaign, involving an expenditure of £300,000 before Christmas, has been instituted by the Commonwealth Minister of Labour, who has announced that the Government had decided to lend £500,000 at three per cent. interest for building projects.

Additional money, he said, would be made available to enable property owners to carry out repairs and extensions to their premises and to supplement the Government's efforts to provide work as quickly as possible.

2,000,000 INDIGNANT FARMERS

WASHINGTON, TO-DAY.

A MIGHTY TUG-OF-WAR BETWEEN ROOSEVELT AND 2,000,000 INDIGNANT AMERICAN FARMERS IN 23 STATES IS IN PROSPECT. THE SITUATION WAS QUIET IN THE FARM STRIKE REGIONS YESTERDAY, PENDING PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S BROADCAST TALK LAST NIGHT.

Mr. Reno, Chairman of the Farm Holiday Association, left for Chicago last night to enlist the support of the railwaymen for the strike. Mr. Reno asserted that the strike was a battle to determine whether the farmers become menial slaves to usurers and industrialists.

In an attempt to meet the farmers, the Farm Administration has suggested an immediate loan of 72 cents per bushel on their wheat, which is estimated to require U. S. $250,000,000. The re-financing of farm debts is being speeded up while Farm Debt Conciliation Boards have been established in 15 States.—Reuter.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE
TO BE CONSIDERED

Washington, To-day.

The question of unemployment insurance will be tackled by the United States Administration when the Secretary for Labour, Miss Frances Perkins, will summon State officials, economists, and labour experts to conference.

Sir William Beveridge, K.C.B., C.B., has been invited in an advisory capacity. — Reuter.

Sir William Beveridge, who has been Director of the London School of Economics and Political Science since 1919, is well-known as an authority on employment problems.

He was a member of the Central (Unemployed) Body for London from 1905 to 1908 and was first Chairman of the Employment Exchanges Committee. From 1908 to 1916 he was Director of Labour Exchanges in the Board of Trade.

INFLATION IDEAS
ABANDONEDRoosevelt Favours
Sound Money.

Washington, To-day.

In most quarters of the United States, it is the opinion that inflation has been definitely abandoned.

"Sound" currency will accompany the rise in the American commodity price level," the President declared.

"When the price level has been restored we shall establish and maintain the dollar. This will not change the purchasing and debt-paying power during the succeeding generation," the President added.

Continuing, he said: "Because of the conditions in this country and of events elsewhere beyond our control, it is increasingly important to develop measures to control the value of the dollar at home."

"The dollar is at present too greatly influenced by accidents to

SHORTER HOURS
STILL SOUGHTWorkers' Buying Power
Increased 37 Per Cent.

$500,000,000 LIQUOR TAX?

Washington, To-day.

Three million six hundred thousand person have found employment in the United States since March, according to an announcement made yesterday by Mr. William H. Green, President of the American Federation of Labour. However, 10,000,000 are still unemployed, hence shorter hours, such as by fixing a 30-hour week in all industries are essential. Mr. Green added.

The apparent buying power of the workers has increased 30.7 per cent. between March and September, but owing to the rise in prices, this figure represents a real increase of only 20.6 per cent.

It is estimated that the employment increase was 500,000 monthly between April and July, and 580,000 in August and September. These figures are more striking because industrial production declined 11 per cent. during that period.

A programme to obtain a minimum revenue of U.S.$500,000,000 in liquor tax in the first year after the repeal of prohibition, is being drafted by the Administration.

The plan necessitates raising the domestic tax from U.S.$1.10 to U.S.$2.80 per gallon, while the present import tax of U.S.$5 per gallon, will be fixed by representatives of the Ways and Means Committee after December 1. It will probably be reduced.

It is estimated that 50,000,000 gallons will have to be imported, as the consumption is 150,000,000 gallons and the domestic supply is only 100,000,000 gallons.—Reuter.

U.S. HEADED
IN THE RIGHT
DIRECTIONRoosevelt's Encouraging
Broadcast.MANAGED CURRENCY
PROGRAMME

Washington, To-day. "Our troubles will not be over by to-morrow. They may take a year or even three years, but we are headed in the right direction," declared President Roosevelt in his broadcast address to the nation, last night.

Four millions had been re-employed since the Recovery machinery was established, he said, but it was unreasonable to expect every State and locality in the huge territory to share the improvement equally and simultaneously.

The Government to ease the gold embargo, would create a Government market for gold under the operation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who were authorised to buy newly-mined American gold, at prices to be determined from time to time.

The dollar would be re-valued after the restoration of price levels, and would be maintained so that it will not change the purchasing and debt-paying power of the succeeding generations.

"It is necessary for the United States to take the gold value of the dollar firmly into its own hands to prevent disturbances from international influences," he said.

Whenever necessary, the Government would buy and sell gold on the world market in order to continue its move towards a managed currency and would maintain continuous control.

No Guessing At
Gold Value.ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH
SUMMARY

Washington, To-day. In his nation-wide broadcast last night, President Roosevelt pledged a managed currency and revealed plans to establish a Government gold market for dollar stabilisation. He also promised that every effort would be made to raise commodity prices and to secure the controlled gold value of the domestic dollar.

"It is the Government's policy to restore the price level first. To secure at permanent gold valuation now would require later changes," he said.—United Press, per S.C. Gold Bar Co.

DALADIER
GOVERNMENT
MAY SURVIVE

French Budget Crisis.

6 PER CENT SALARY CUTS
MAY BE ACCEPTED

Paris, To-day.

Although a definite issue on the French Budget proposals had not been reached when the Chamber of Deputies adjourned last night until to-day, the survival of the Daladier Cabinet is now a definite possibility.

The proposed six per cent. cut in the salaries of State employees, sanctioned by the Finance Committee to assist in reducing the Budget deficit of 6,000,000,000 francs, also has a definite chance of acceptance.

The Government has not yet lost hope that the Radicals and Socialists will reach a compromise formula satisfactory to the conflicting demands. M. Lamoureux, the Budget Minister, has informed the Socialists that the Government will not tolerate inflation, preferring to fall honourably. — Reuter.

TYPHOON TRAGEDY ECHO

Tokyo, To-day.

In spite of authentic reports regarding the recovery and identification of the bodies of Mrs. Prevost and Mrs. Milner-Barry, both wives of officers of H.M.S. Eagle, who were drowned when the Yashima Maru sank during a typhoon in the Inland Sea, the British Consulate at Kobe informed Reuter to-day that the body of Mrs. Prevost was still missing.

The funeral of Mrs. Milner-Barry took place in a local cemetery this morning. A number of Japanese officials, including Admiral Arizuka, were present. Lieutenant-Commander Prevost and Milner-Barry have arrived in Kobe and expect to rejoin H.M.S. Eagle in Hong Kong. Meanwhile the search for the body of Mrs. Prevost is continuing. — Reuter.

OUTBURST

London, Oct. 16.

Mr. Alfred Duff Cooper, Financial Secretary to the War Office, to-night asserted that Germany has been and is preparing for war. This statement was made during an address to the Westminster Junior Imperial League.

Never in the history of the world has a whole nation prepared for war with the same unanimity and the same enthusiasm that is now inspiring the German nation, Mr. Cooper said.

"Let us make it plain that we are obeying all the treaties that we have signed but that we are also maintaining the traditions that prevent any Power from seeking to upset the peace of Europe." Mr. Cooper added that Great Britain must stand by the Allies.—United Press.

TREATY NECESSARY.

Berlin, Oct. 15.

Chancellor Adolph Hitler to-day told the people of Germany and the World at large why Germany had withdrawn from the League of Nations and the Disarmament Conference.

In the same address which was broadcast to all parts of the nation, he outlined Germany's attitude regarding disarmament and denied territorial aspirations. He did, however, declare that Germany desires the complete return and control of the Saar Basin with its valuable coal deposits now operated by France.

Paris Evening Fashions

Leading Houses' Varied Displays.

FULL SKIRTS AND TRAINS RE-APPEAR

On evening dresses Chanel puts little ruche round the neckline, which is frequently cut to a long boat shape. Little sleeves are usual. Square and pointed necklines are also correct. This waistline, which has not changed, dips very slightly at the back.

Evening dresses just escape the round, a few have trains. Lace dresses have transparent long sleeves, leaving the turn of the arm bare; a brocade dress also has long sleeves and a low neck. An evening wrap has a velvet hood. There are velvet and for evening wraps of all lengths. Afternoon skirts are a little longer than those worn in the morning.

Return of the Train

For the evening also there are many velvet dresses with pointed trains. Plum, purple, bottle-green, nasturtium-red, and a good deal of black are used for these dresses. The front of the bodice is invariably high, there may be no back, or the back may be filled with close-fitting figured or plain net. Sleeves to match are worn with the dress. The skirts of evening dresses in this collection are precisely cut.

Patou has renounced the close swathing and binding of the hips and now makes dresses which leave the hips freedom of movement, without draping them heavily.

Madeleine Vionnet has always done this, believing that it is not possible for rigidity to be graceful. Some of the evening dresses have little silver sleeves; dark skirts may have light tops. Little dinner dresses do not have trains. Short and long evening wraps are made in bright colours and in black to wear with black. With one black dress a muff of camellias is carried and camellias are worn on the bodice. Pale gold velvet is used for a dress of beautiful simplicity; nasturtium-red velvet for another.

Real Jewels

Patou puts real jewels of great beauty with his evening dresses. The impression of the whole collection is one of dignity. There is nothing in it which could be copied unexpensively. It is essentially for the taste of the women who can afford to dress well and exclusively. The only concession to popular taste is his use of small coloured glass clips and clasps. These he puts on afternoon and evening dresses and they have already been worn in Paris this week.

Feathers and Aligrettes

Callot Soeurs' evening dresses are of two kinds, the simple and the stately. For the young there are dresses of pale silk crepes; more formal dresses are of rich, supple silver lame shot with colour; their full skirts, which have fish fin flounces, sweep the ground. Ribbon shoulder-strap are carried down the back to bows and ends at the waist as they were last season. Some Peralan brocades also make evening dresses, and there are red and silver gauze dresses.

Feathers and aligrettes are treated in the same way as flowers—

Colour Scheme In Dressing

Building Up A "Set."

Opossum goes well with grey, brown, or black, so that a grey and hat, a brown dress and hat, or a coloured dress and a black hat can be worn.

Shoes, stockings, and gloves should match the dress if grey or brown is chosen. If a coloured dress and black hat is worn, then shoes should be black, and the stockings grey or brown—dull enough to tone with the fur. In this case, the gloves should match the stockings.

It will be seen from this how easy it is to build up an apparent-ly expensive winter wardrobe with-little outlay. The different "sets" need not all be bought at the same time, but at intervals when you can afford them.

YOUTHFUL NOTE IN COATS

Trim Shoulders And Slender Waists.

LATEST PARIS STYLES

"Youth" is the sign of chic on the newest coats shown in Paris. Trim shoulders, slender waists and broad revers or twicky fur trims applied in new ways mark the models designed to wear until fashion's finished autumn product is on the market.

Belts appear on scores of models, sometimes in colours contrasting with that of the coat. Brick red wool belts slipped through slits at the waist-lines of iron grey wool black leather belts on grey home-spuns and brown belts on green wools are indicative of the trend.

Mahogany brown, smoke blue, iron grey, dark green and bright red wools make the majority of the models. Most of their silhouettes remain slim, although some sports models hang as loose as a man's raglan coat.

Foxes (silver, stone, blue and brown) are widely used, while such pelts as geyak, astrakhan, beaver and shaved lamb are also popular.

For the girl who want a sports-like model untrammelled by fur, designers display coats with revers so broad they reach or surpass the shoulders line.

LATEST FOR LINGERIE

BRIDGE NOTES

CARDS OF HIDDEN ENTRY

It happens frequently, especially when playing a No Trump contract, that the Declarer is faced with the difficulty of putting Dummy in on account of an absence of cards of entry and consequently he is obliged to lead away from his own strength instead of up to it. Sometimes, of course, this cannot be helped, there may be no possibility of putting Dummy in or of putting him in more than once, but often there are what may be described as concealed entries not apparent on the surface.

There are many occasions when the Declarer wishes to lead two or three different suits up to his hand. The number of obvious entries in Dummy. This may be done in a variety of ways according to the nature of Dummy's holding, the process frequently consisting of Declarer himself unblocking or playing a higher card than is necessary to take the trick from his own hand, or indeed sometimes sacrificing an actual trick. Here is a simple example:—

S.—J 8 2
H.—9 6 4
D.—J 9 3
C.—J 9 8

A.—S—7 5 4
H.—10 5 2
D.—K 10 4 2
C.—K Q 7

Z.—S.—A Q 10
H.—A Q J 3
D.—A Q 8 5
C.—A 6

B.—S.—K 9 6 3
H.—K 8 7
D.—6
C.—10 5 4 3 2

Z is playing a contract of Three No Trumps. A leads the 2 of Diamonds. Dummy plays the 3 and B the 6. Z can win the trick with the 8, but as he desires to have two entries in Dummy to lead Spades and Hearts his best play is to win with the Ace of Diamonds and return the Queen. If A plays the King the two entries in Diamonds are made. If he holds up the King Z is no worse off.

Second example:—
S.—J 8 5 4
H.—9 6 4
D.—Q J 4 3
C.—10 9

A.—S.—7 6 3 2

C.—A Q 4

B.—S.—K 9
H.—K J 10 8 7 2
D.—5
C.—K 8 7 3

Score love all. B has dealt and called Three Hearts; Z Three No Trumps. All pass A leads the 7 of Diamonds, Y plays the 3, B the 5. Z should now play the King of Diamonds and resist the temptation of taking the trick cheaply with the 10. If he does so and returns the King of Diamonds A will assuredly hold up the Ace and Y will never get in.

By playing the King of Diamonds he assures a certain card of entry. At trick 2 he leads the 10. If A does not put up his Ace Z overtakes with the Knave in Dummy and should then lead the 4 of Spades and finesse his Queen. The Ace of Spades is then led and Y has another entry with the Knave. Note that if Z finessses the 10 of Spades he deprives himself of the further entry. The fall of the 9 of Spades by B is a valuable guide. Unless it is a false card B can have two only.

A More Difficult Case. Both these examples are somewhat elementary and in neither case should the correct procedure be missed by any experienced player. The following example from duplicate play is, however, more difficult:

S.—K 8 4 2
H.—7 6
D.—K 10 8 7
C.—6 4 3

A.—S.—Q J 10 7 5
H.—None
D.—9 6 5 3 2
C.—K Q 8

Z.—S.—A
H.—A K Q J 10 8 5 2
D.—A
C.—A J 5

B.—S.—9 6 3
H.—9 4 3
D.—Q J 4
C.—10 9 7 2

Z is playing a contract of Six Hearts. A leads the Queen of Spades, which Z wins with the Ace. How should he play to make his contract?

An obvious method is to lead out the Ace of Diamonds and then the eight Hearts and try to establish a Squeeze position so that Z can make two Clubs or force A or B to lead one of Y's King suits. But this can be and was defeated. A and B have only to keep their Clubs and Z must lose two tricks eventually with the proper defence.

Z has, however, a certainty by more subtle play. He must make a card of entry in Dummy and he can do this only by sacrificing a certain trick in the suit.

At trick two he leads his Ace of Diamonds. Then he leads his 5 of Hearts. If B wins with the 9, as assuredly he must, that is the only trick his side makes. The 6 of Hearts is entry for Z to discard his two losing Clubs on the King of Spades and King of Diamonds. Alternatively, of course, if B refuses to win with the first trump trick with the 9 of Hearts the same result is achieved.

It is safe to say that at least 90 per cent. of players would fall in this position. They would consider it ridiculous to give away a certain trick in Hearts.

Yet only by creating a Heart entry can Z make his contract.

MAIL REVIEW "WHEN LADIES MEET"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

With Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery in the leading roles and a supporting cast including Myrna Loy, Alice Brady and Frank Morgan, "When Ladies Meet," now showing at the Queen's Theatre, is one of the smartest and most entertaining comedies screened. The picture is adapted from Rachel Crother's stage success. In it the performances add a zest to the brittle dialogue and hilarious situations upon which the unique plot relies. Miss Harding as the understanding, modern wife of a philandering husband, gives a portrayal work in reminiscent of her work in "Holiday." Montgomery is his usual adequate self as the young newspaperman who handles his romantic troubles as he would a front page story.

MAIL REVIEW "ORDERS IS ORDERS"—KING'S THEATRE

"Orders is Orders," the current attraction at the King's Theatre, features Charlotte Greenwood in a brilliant skit on American film production methods, illustrating the farcical situations that can arise when a production unit take charge of a British military barracks. James Gleason as the American film director makes a great hit, while Cyril Maud adds a clever study of a susceptible colonel.

Realistic backgrounds, the humours of soldier life and the characteristic bustle of a film unit on location, make this picture outstanding entertainment.

MAIL REVIEW "THE BIG CAGE"—CENTRAL THEATRE

Combining real dangers with thrills of the type rarely provided by a motion picture, "The Big Cage," featuring Clyde Beatty, called the world's greatest trainer of wild animals, is the current attraction at the Central Theatre. The film presents a circus drama which is based on the life of Beatty, whose career, fraught as it is with danger, has been an exciting one. "The Big Cage" is a Universal picture and one of the outstanding films of 1933. In it, Beatty does something never before attempted by any wild animal trainer. He puts lions and tigers, 43 of them, into one huge cage—and enters the cage alone and unarmed. This feat alone, hair-raising as it is, is but one of several thrilling scenes which follow each other rapidly in this great action film.

MAIL REVIEW "RED-HEADED WOMAN"—STAR THEATRE

Jean Harlow, who made her screen hit in "Hell's Angels" does excellent work in "Red-Headed Woman," the screen adaptation of the sensational Kathleen Brush novel, the current attractions at the Star Theatre. A very competent cast is assembled and the production is good.

Excellent support is given by Lewis Stone as the father, Chester Morris as the husband, Lella Hyams as the disillusioned wife, Una Merkel, Henry Stephenson, and May Robson.

PEPPYS RELICS AT
King Charles.
COLLECTION ON VIEW

It was a happy and courteous idea of the authorities of Magdalene College, in this year of Peppy's tercentenary, to give the wider public an opportunity of seeing the treasures associated with the diarist which have long been in their keeping. The collection is on view at the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge, daily and on Sunday afternoons, and will be continued during the summer months. There is no charge.

The idea of the exhibition is to show Pepys rather as a connoisseur and a man of affairs than to exploit the diary, which indeed plays a comparatively small part. The second and last volumes are on view, the former open at the account of one of the annual "solemnities" in memory of the cutting of the "stone." More than ever is one puzzled at the selection of words which the diarist writes in full; in this case, not only the proper names, but all the vintages are so distinguished, the "stew'd carp," the roast chickens, the "jowle" (of salmon), the "lanzy." A manuscript of unusual interest is Pepys's shorthand version of the conversation in which King Charles described to him his escape after the battle of Worcester, telling how he and his companion hid in the Boscomb oak, taking with them victuals for the whole day, "bread, cheese, small beer, and nothing else."

His Official Life. We may see many relics of Pepys's official life: he seems to have had no compunction in plundering the Admiralty for the benefit of Magdalene. One of the many volumes of his official correspondence is here shown, along with historical rolls of the Navy, an inventory of supplies for the ships of the Spanish Armada, and an "orthographic symmetric of a ship divided in the middle by a straight line from stern to stern," showing all the decks. Of more general interest is the collection of old books and manuscripts, which include several fine Caxtons, a New Testament in English of about 1430, the original edition of Newton's "Principia" seven Latin grammars of 1495-1499, maps and drawings of London, even French fashion-plates (1670-1696).

The remarkable "Caligraphical Collection," all carefully annotated, indeed, the whole exhibition gives one a high idea of Pepys as a bookman. It includes two fine fragments of uncial script cut out of the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Luke in the Chapter Library of Durham Cathedral, where the raps may still be seen. The explanation of the outrage is that the Dean was Dr. Nathaniel Crew, a friend of the diarist, who, as a brother of "my lady" Sandwich, did not regard himself as under any great restraint. This bit of loot is described as "a present to me from my most honour'd and reverend friends, the Dean and Chapter of Durham Cathedral, anno domini 1700."

Among the many other points of interest in the display must be mentioned a song-book containing one of the two copies of Pepys's song, "Beauty Retire," in the Pepys's Library and the record in the Magdalene College Register reprimanding him for being "scandalously drunk" on the preceding evening.

THRILLS IN HAUNTED LIGHTHOUSE

A "Comedy Shocker"

The Haunted Light. By Evadne Price. (Long 7s. 6d.).

This novel is described as a "comedy thriller," but there is a shocking quantity of killing in its pages. Two lighthouse men have already met their death in the Cornish Derry lighthouse, and a third is reputed to have gone mad when Sam Higgins takes charge. He is a cockney, and the haunted lighthouse cannot subdue him.

But he is certainly tested not only by the horror of the place, but by a certain Uncle Matt, as ghoulish a dope merchant as ever gnashed his way through the movies. Still, he has a charming niece, Jennifer, who, with the blonde Sylvia, and a reporter named Jerry, manages to zone down the horrors which it has become her life purpose to avenge.

Adventures Of A
Rum-Runner"The Real McCoy" Tells
His Story

HAD FUN IN GAOL

A man who time and again eluded the American Customs officers and landed 700,000 cases of liquor in the United States before he was gaoled has had his exploits chronicled in a book.

He is Captain Bill McCoy, master of the schooner Tomoka, who outwitted the coastguards for years before the vessel was taken by the revenue cutter Seneca.

The book "The Real McCoy" (Stanley Paul, 12s. 6d.) is written by Mr. Frederic F. van de Water, but the words are those of McCoy himself.

"With the little I was able to keep from my rum-running profits," he says, "I am able to get along."

He and his brother have gone back to their old trade of shipbuilding in Florida.

Evidently the profits were small for the great risk he took. He writes:—

There were times, during my years in the game, when I dreamed of buying yachts instead of selling them. A cruise to the South Seas promised myself never has come off either Bermuda, Jamaica, Nassau, St. Pierre, and the Newark and New Brunswick and Trenton gaoled were the farthest I got.

As for the cash that was to set me up as king of some far-off Polynesian isle where girls were beautiful and men were scarce, most of it went to make a lot of lawyers richer than, thanks to them, I shall ever be.

Thrilled And Chilled

But, maintains McCoy, if he made little money, he did things that only a few could equal.

I've been thrilled and chilled. I've been double-crossed and robbed and shot at and gaoled. I've owned and sailed the sweetest schooner that ever carried a bone, in her teeth—the Arethusa; later the Tomoka, still later the Marie Celeste.

I've made friends I'll remember always, and an enemy or so I'm entirely willing to forget. I've had a lot of fun, even in gaol. And if there is anything more than that to life, I don't want it.

An interesting sidelight as to the audacity of McCoy is shown by one incident of which he tells:

My schooner was in harbour on July 4. Though she was under British registry, I dressed ship, stringing international code signals on her lines and halyards; but I had no American flag aboard. I marched up to the Consulate and asked Lathrop to lend me one.

"Why," he spluttered, "you low-down, nifty rum-runner! You come and ask me, the representative of the Government that you are gyping, for a flag? I ought to throw you out of my office."

"If I'm a crook, I'm an American crook anyway, Consul," I told him. "You won't lend me one?"

"Yes, I will," he snorted. "Certainly, I will. Only not officially, Bill."

The Capture

In a career of exciting incidents, the capture of the Arethusa, or Tomoka as it was generally known, was one of the best.

The following is McCoy's description of it:

Out of the mist loomed the white, high shape of the Seneca bearing down directly on us. I did not leave my position. My conscience was clear. When he came within hailing distance he called "Tomoka ahoy! I'm sending an officer to examine your papers."

Even then I was not worried. My papers were O.K., but in order that there might be no mistake, I told my mate, St. Clair Tanner, to take the British flag aloft and lash it to the mainmast.

A whaleboat was sent by the Seneca, and Lieutenant Perkins came aboard.

He turned to his crew and shouted "All aboard." They swarmed up to the Arethusa's deck, husky squareheads, each with a Colt in his thigh. I grinned at Perkins.

"Lieutenant," I told him, "you are going for a ride."

Then I yelled "Full speed to sea!" The engine pounded. The Arethusa quivered as she took the thrust of the screw and turned her bows to the open main.

There came a warning blast from the Seneca's siren, but I only laughed. Though her guns were on us, she did not dare fire with her men aboard. She started in pursuit. That wheezy old tub trying to catch my Arethusa!

Perkins was flabbergasted, and then angry.

"Heave her to!" he yelled. "Who are you to give orders on my ship?" I wanted to know.

"I'll damned soon show you," he roared, his face crimson, and snapped to his boatswain's mate, a big lad named Ryan, "Take that wheel!"

Arey and Tanner were at the helm. Both were big men too, and after one look at them the boatswain's mate decided he was deaf.

"You're Bill McCoy?" the lieutenant snarled.

"Never heard of him. I replied. "Well," he insisted, "he's on the ship somewhere."

Surrender

We returned to the deck. I called man after man aft and asked him gravely if he were Bill McCoy.

Each replied with great solemnity that he'd never heard of anyone with that name. I thought Perkins was going to have a fit of apoplexy.

"I've stood enough kidding," he blurted at last, "and I'm going to take this ship in."

"Like hell," I told him. He yelled to his men, "Draw your guns!" and to Arey, "Get away from that helm!"

Across the cabin hatch we faced each other, revenue men on one side, rum-runners on the other, armed and scowling. Perkins was white now instead of flushed. He knew and I knew, as my anger ebbed, that one false move would spell massacre.

"This is a British ship," I told him more quietly, and you are seizing her on the high seas."

"Where's Bill McCoy?" he asked. "I'm McCoy."

"I thought so, McCoy. You are making a big mistake."

"The only reason you're still here," I told him, "is that you are my countrymen. If you'd been anything but Americans you would all be overboard by now."

"Be sensible," he said. "If the Government hasn't anything on you now, it will if you try to kidnap us. And we won't be kidnapped without a fight. Heave her to, McCoy. I'm advising you for your own good."

He was right. I was clear-headed now. So we hauled down the jib and threw her into the wind and waited for the Seneca to catch up with us. She bore down, all hot and bothered. Perkins and his crew rowed back to her. I lay, hove-to, waiting for his next move.

Every scrap of paper on board the ship was burned. He dumped all arms overside, too—machine-guns, rifles, sawed-off shotguns, revolvers.

McCoy relates how they then tried to make a dash of it, and had almost got away when the Seneca began to fire. Shells roared over their heads and dived into the water.

One burst in the water, so close to the bulwarks that the schooner staggered and several of the crew were knocked off their feet.

"I sang out to Arey," he adds, "We let the jib run down. There were tears in my eyes. We had taken our chance and just missed winning free, my Arethusa and I were caught at last."

$25,000 FOR "WAR
MEMOIRS"High Figure For Lloyd
George's Publication.

"The suggestion" that the amount being paid for Lloyd George's war memoirs, serially and in book form, both here and in America, "stands around $25,000 is, perhaps, pretty accurate, and it may be rather more, certainly not less." So an editorial writer says in W. H. Smith and Son's "Book Window."

A STUDY OF WALPOLE

A study of Hugh Walpole has been written by Miss Marguerite Steen, who is herself a novelist of remarkable quality. Ivor Nicholson and Watson will publish it.

HILAIRE BELLOC
ON NAPOLEONMarlborough's Tactics
And Strategy.

Mr. Hilaire Belloc, who has served in the French artillery, naturally regards Napoleon as the greatest of captains, but Napoleon, he tells his readers, "seems to have looked on Marlborough as an equal."

This is in his new book, "The Tactics and Strategy of the Great Duke of Marlborough." Mr. Belloc might have gone further, a critic writes in the London "Times Literary Supplement," and said, "one of his masters"; "for he admits that Napoleon read and re-read Marlborough's campaigns, commenting on them continuously in his own hands."

Mr. Belloc "notes that in Marlborough's career there is no example of a great defensive action; like all great captains, he was normally inclined to take the offensive."

BERNARD SHAW'S
"ASIDE."Will It Take The Place
Of "Introduction"?

Will "Aside" take the place of "Introduction," or is Bernard Shaw a law to himself in that way, as in many other ways?

When "Foreword" began to take the place of "Introduction," reviewers disliked and resented its use.

Shaw has written "an Aside" to his friend Lillah McCarthy's "Myself and My Friends," a book which is being reviewed along with a book on Sarah Bernhardt and "Ellen Terry's Memoirs."

The Great Experiment

The world continues to watch with sympathetic, if somewhat anxious, eyes the development of Mr. Roosevelt's National Recovery programme. The new Administration has now been in office for seven months. It is not surprising, therefore, that the people of the United States should be beginning to take stock of the achievements of their new leader and should be asking themselves how the gigantic experiment initiated on March 4 is working out. It is, of course, far too early to make even a tentative estimate of the efficacy of the heroic measures taken by Mr. Roosevelt to lift the United States out of the depths of the depression; but there are signs that some sections of the community are beginning to look for concrete results, and it is certain that before Congress reassembles in January the demand for even more radical measures will assume formidable proportions unless a rapid improvement in the general economic condition of the country takes place in the meantime. Indeed it must be admitted that during the past few weeks the rate of recovery has appreciably slowed down; the vigour of the first onslaught on the depression seems for the moment to be partially exhausted; and it is clear that the testing time of the huge and complicated machinery of State regulation which Mr. Roosevelt has improvised has now arrived. The voice of criticism is beginning to make itself audible among the farmers, who are not satisfied, in spite of the marked increase since last year, with the prices of their staple products such as wheat and cotton. Among the industrialists also the increased burden of labour costs entailed by the various codes, which have been negotiated with such surprising rapidity is already beginning to give food for serious thought. Nor have the codes themselves been brought into action without creating a certain amount of disturbance between the relations of capital and labour, and strikes have taken place in many parts of the country over disputes arising out of their interpretation. Moreover it is widely admitted even in Government circles that the increase in purchasing power, which the raising of wages and the diminution of the hours of labour was intended to effect, has so far failed to result in any proportionate revival in the demand for commodities. Hence on all sides there is a growing demand for direct currency inflation, and this is likely to be intensified greatly when Congress meets in three months' time. So far Mr. Roosevelt has declined to make use of the inflationary powers conferred on him by the Thomas amendment to the Farm Bill. But how long will he be able to resist the pressure of Congress? Already Senator Fletcher, the chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, is demanding the issue of huge quantities of "green backs," and there can be little doubt that similar demands will be strongly pressed by a large majority in both Houses. In these circumstances it is hardly surprising that financial opinion in New York and elsewhere is watching events with some anxiety, and the recent fall in the exchange value of the dollar must be attributed to the uneasiness felt by American holders of capital at the danger of currency inflation. Yet, in spite of all these disquieting prospects, it would be altogether premature to assume that the Roosevelt experiment is heading for disaster. No one can expect the path to recovery to be anything but thorny. Checks and complications are from the nature of things inevitable, but when seen in their true perspective they should assume much less formidable proportions. For the progress towards recovery already effected by Mr. Roosevelt during his first seven months in office has been sufficiently astonishing. His immense courage, his readiness to assume almost unparalleled responsibilities, and his bold and fertile empiricism have certainly succeeded in infusing a new life into the American people. Compared with the almost abject despondency which characterized the final months of the Hoover regime the change which has taken place in the temper of the public has been little short of miraculous. And this change has already translated itself into concrete results too striking to be ignored. Industrial production, though it is still far short of the prosperity level, has risen by leaps and bounds; prices have shown a substantial recovery, and unemployment has sensibly diminished. Though the reabsorption of 6,000,000 workers by September, which was so confidently announced by General Johnson as the immediate objective of the National Recovery Administration, has not been attained, the total increase in employment cannot be very far short of 3,000,000 and that is no small achievement. Meanwhile, in spite of immense difficulties, Mr. Roosevelt claims to have succeeded in bringing something like eighty per cent of the industry of the country within the framework of his "codes," including the coal industry, where opposition threatened to become really serious, and the automobile industry, where Mr. Ford still appears to be maintaining a kind of passive resistance. The problem of the weaker banks has also been attacked under the deposit guarantee law with the aid of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, though it must be admitted that financial opinion is still far from being convinced of the soundness of this procedure. All this has been accomplished with a magnificent disregard of all the known canons of orthodox economics and by methods which to European eyes

First "Long-Distance" Flight
One of the biggest gatherings of baby planes ever held took place on September 17 at Chalons-sur-Marne, to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the first "long-distance" aerial flight.

In 1908 Henry Farman, the 33-year-old son of English journalist, flew some 16 miles, from Chalons-sur-Marne to one of the principal vineyards of the Champagne district—the first flight made by any airman from one town to another.

The aerial guests—for whom two temporary airports were constructed, in addition to the great military aerodrome at Rheims—also celebrated some other records set up in the following year:

Altitude, by Hubert Latham (about 15,000 feet); Speed, by Glen Curtiss (19 miles in 24 minutes); and Long Distance, by Farman 115 miles).

Your Daily Smile

Modern Manners

Modern Wooer: "I say, old thing, may I attend your wedding?"

She: "Why, I'm not even engaged!"

He: "Oh, as bridegroom, I mean!"

A Happy Return.

Vicar: "How did you get that black eye, Mrs. York?"

Mrs. York: "Well, sir, me 'usbund came out of prison last Toosday, and seeing as it was his birthday, I wished 'im many 'appy returns."

Asked For It

The waitress who had taken the man's order some time ago now returned to his table deep in meditation.

"Ah," said the customer brightly, "a penny for your thoughts, young lady."

The girl raised a pair of inquiring eyes.

"Well, sir," she said, "we are very busy to-day, and I was just wondering whether you were a stewed rabbit or a boiled owl."

Facts You Did Not Know.

Engineers in a Boston pavement testing laboratory have discovered a new type of non-skid asphalt paving that will permit motor vehicles to travel at a speed of 100 miles an hour safely.

Of China's imports of flour last year the United States supplied 57 per cent and Australia 12 per cent, while Australia furnished 60 per cent of the wheat and the United States 19 per cent.

must appear strange indeed. But Mr. Roosevelt, however ignorant he may be of the academic teachings of the economists, does thoroughly understand the psychology of his own people; and the devices which superior persons are inclined to ridicule under the terms of "hoop-la" and "Ballyhoo" appear at any rate to have engendered a spirit of war-time enthusiasm which should itself prove a valuable factor in the war against depression which he has undertaken. It is this war-time spirit which has enabled him in seven months to effect a real revolution in the economic structure of American capitalism, and has induced the most individualistic of nations to assent to measures of far-reaching control. But the question, so vital not only to America but to the world at large, still remains: Whither is this gigantic experiment leading? Is it to prosper, or to the abyss of currency inflation and economic collapse? And here the experience of the past may be no sure guide to prediction. The economic and financial conditions in the world are so unprecedented that it would be rash to venture any dogmatic assertion. Where there is no certainty there can at least be hope. Mr. Roosevelt has undertaken a gigantic task with immense courage, and he has displayed a singular freedom from preconceived notions which has enabled him so far to adopt a frankly experimental attitude. In an inflationary world he has set in motion great and unpredictable forces. Will he be able to direct the industrial countries by raising the standards to which not only the United States but also the other nations of the world are anxiously awaiting the answer.

FAILURE AFTER 14
YEARS OF WORK
LEAGUE'S GROTESQUE
BALANCE-SHEET

"INTERNATIONAL BINDWEED"

(By D. E. Arnold.)

The bottom has dropped out of the market for League of Nations stock.

The balance-sheet after 14 years is grotesque.

One the assets side there is only one entry, the shell of the new League Palace at Geneva. It is an asset, at present, but unless subscriptions can be got in and something done to mend the League's reputation there will be no staff or delegates to occupy it when it is completed at the end of 1935.

The liability side is crowded enough. The past year has been an unbroken record of failure in every department of the League's activity. The mere mention of Manchukuo, Disarmament, South Kensington, Assyria, Anschluss, Four-Power Pact, or Gran Chaco causes a blush or a smile, but never a thrill of pride.

The outstanding political failure of the League has, of course, been the eighteen-month-old so-called Disarmament Conference. No amount of formula-hunting, face-saving, or Henderson-perambulating can any longer conceal the fact that disarmament is out of the arena of practical politics.

Such influence as the League exercised in the Sino-Japanese dispute was wholly bad. Proceeding on the fiction that all Member States are equal and have control over their own territories, it misled China into relying on League support and embittered Japan.

Impotent When Needed

When it came to action the League was impotent. The Lytton Report was still-born. Japan has carried out the policy she thought suited her best, just as though there were no League. It is true that Manchukuo is not to be recognised internationally. If this means that Manchukuo as such is not to be invited to any international parties, no doubt she will be able to grin and bear it.

After being snubbed in Asia the League turned to South America. Bolivia and Paraguay, both Member States, were engaged in one of their usual quarrels. Following the fashion set by the East, they carefully refrained from admitting that it was "a state of war," for that would have given the League an official reason for blundering in. Eventually the League decided to adopt its usual course of sending a Commission to the Gran Chaco.

The latest news is that the two disputants have told the League they would rather have an inquiry by the Governments of Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Peru. When one bears in mind how little the South American republics love each other, this is a sad commentary on the futility of the League even in minor disputes.

Turning from politics to finance and economics, the failure of the South Kensington Conference needs no emphasis. It was no subject a failure that nobody even bothers to use the stock apology that "it cleared the air."

Justice And Labour

The judicial organ of the League, the Permanent Court of International Justice, may be dismissed in a few words, for it has ceased to be taken seriously. Ever since its decision on the legality of an Austro-German Zollverein it has been utterly discredited as an impartial tribunal. The question was referred to it before the present Hitler regime. When judgment was given it could not be concealed that the opinions of the different judges were in line with the foreign policy of their respective countries. The man in the street refuses to believe that this was a mere coincidence.

As for the League's International Labour Office, that body is now dithering before the chaos it has itself helped to create.

It was instituted to safeguard the standards of living in advanced industrial countries by raising the standards in backward countries, so decreasing the handicap of low wages and employment standards in international competition. In fact it has done the very opposite, and increased the discrepancy. Polish and, above all, Japanese competition are but two of the many glaring instances of the failure of the I.L.O.

To-day that body is utterly impotent. Instead of carrying out its appointed task it falters feebly after the wraith of an international 40-hour week convention, regardless of the fact that its 48-hour convention is already looked upon as a 12-year-old international joke, and that any convention which prescribed international hours of labour without also prescribing rates of wages is not merely futile but dishonest.

Small wonder that Japan, in withdrawing from the League, promises continued co-operation with the I.L.O.

So long as the League aroused bitter feelings of hostility there was some hope for it. But now it is not opposed at all; it is simply ignored. This is all the more remarkable in view of the enormous interests vested in keeping it alive. The League affects to sneer at vested interests when they are concerned, say, in armaments manufacture, but nobody can give the League supports with a vested interest.

Too Many Experts

Ever since its foundation it has been the deliberate policy of the League to extend the number of its committee "experts" and establish the maximum number of personal contacts. The result is that to-day there are thousands of civil servants, professors, doctors, lawyers, politicians and propagandists scattered throughout the world who anxiously and tenaciously cling to the possibility of a trip to Geneva as a high-spot in an otherwise humdrum existence.

It is to be hoped that the last has been heard of the hoary excuse that the league is but an infant. In the 14 years of its life it has had lavished upon it more opportunities for international action and more international goodwill than existed throughout the whole of the preceding two thousand years.

The lessons of the League failure are obvious, but they require to be emphasised if the enervating habit of "leaving it to Geneva" is to be shaken off. The first lesson is that the League is built on what, in the present state of political development, is a complete fallacy—that all Member States are equal. China was the first example of this fallacy. Cuba was another. And

WHITE GIRL ALONE
IN JUNGLE

Self-Imposed Sojourn In Darkest Africa.

STUDYING AFRICAN CULTURE

Dar-es-Salaam.

Twenty miles from the nearest white person, alone in the depths of Central Africa, a young American girl is working hard to win a scholarship.

Little is known of her, except that her surname is Mandelbaum, and that she has exiled herself for a year in the African bush so as to make a first hand study of African culture in the hope of winning a scholarship. Miss Mandelbaum has gained the complete confidence of the local tribes.

She lives in a native hut, where she can be seen bending over her books, with an African girl attending to her wants.

When she desires companionship, her only resort is to associate with the people of the tribes among whom she lives.

These simple people answer her questions politely. They think it strange for her to have to work so hard, but evidently wish her well.

Miss Mandelbaum's nearest white neighbour lives 20 miles away—at a small British Government post.—Reuter.

Billiards Sensation

Borderers And Lincolns
May Withdraw From League.

The announcement yesterday of the intended withdrawal from the Steel, Coulson's Billiards League of both the Borderers and Lincolns Sergeants Mess teams has caused a mild sensation.

It is understood that the two regiments are not in favour of the new rule which permits of men below the rank of lance sergeant taking part in the competition by assisting civilian clubs of which they are members.

In view of the intended withdrawal of the two leading military sides the number of teams taking part in the competition which commences on Thursday will be reduced to seven—St. Patrick's Club, Palace Hotel, Garrison Sgts. Mess, R. E. Sgts. Mess, R. A. Sgts. Mess, C. P. O.'s Mess, and the Police.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SAILORS' HOME AND
SEAMEN'S INSTITUTE

(To the Editor, "China Mail.")

Sir, May I make use of the columns of your journal to express the thanks of the Sailors' Home and the Missions to Seamen to the Naval Authorities for the compliment paid that Corporation on Saturday night when their Headquarters Building was illuminated by searchlight.

May I also be permitted to say that the correct title of the building is the Sailors' Home and Seamen's Institute, being the result of the amalgamation of the old Sailor's Home, West Point, and the Seamen's Institute until recently situated on Johnston Road, (old Praya East). It is not, as reported, the new Sailors' and Soldiers' Home.

In view of several errors of the same nature which have recently occurred it may be as well to explain that the new water front buildings of large size along Gloucester Road are from West to East the new Royal Naval Canteen (in process of erection), the new Sailors' Home and Seamen's Institute shortly to be officially opened, the Luk Kwok Fan Dim Chinese Hotel, and a little further on, the new No. 2 Police Station.

The Sailors' and Soldiers' Home, opened a few years back, lies on Hennessy Road, standing at a slant from the present road which will follow the line formed by the front of the S. and S. Home as soon as the old Naval Canteen is demolished. The Sailors' and Soldiers' Home is about to add additional accommodation, and subscriptions to assist that object will I believe be gratefully received by the Rev. E. C. R. Tribbeck.

G. T. Walbridge.

PUO YUI-YI CASE STILL UNSETTLED.

Chinese Protest To Tokyo.

FRENCH CONSUL ATTEMPTS TO MEDIATE

Canton, To-day.

No new developments in connection with the Pao Yui-yi case, in which a Chinese naturalised Korean was kidnapped by Japanese at Shanghai and carried off in a car belonging to the Japanese Consul General, are reported except that the French Consul-General at Shanghai, M. Bonnafant, invited Mr. Kan Chia-hou (Chinese diplomat for South-Western China) and the Japanese Consul-General to a dinner reception at the French Consulate yesterday, at which M. Bonnafant tried to mediate between the two parties.

It appears that the Japanese Consul General is still awaiting instructions from Tokyo before a definite reply can be made to the Chinese protest—Central News Agency.

SHANGHAI-CANTON AIR SERVICE.

Bi-Weekly Trips Start
To-morrow.

HONG KONG—MANILA LINK PROBABLE.

A bi-weekly air mail and passenger service between Shanghai and Canton will begin to-morrow according to officials of the China National Aviation Corporation.

The aviation corporation, in which a large interest is owned by Pan-American Airways, the American concern operating service between the United States and South America for the last five years, hopes the new service later will include Hong Kong, there connecting with the projected Hong Kong-Manila service.

For the time being the landing places will be Wenchow, Foochow, Amoy and Swatow.

Regular service has been maintained for several months between Shanghai and Peking, and Shanghai, Hankow and Chungking, up the Yangtze river.

Mr. H. M. Dixby, Pan-American Airways representative, announced following his return to Shanghai a few weeks ago from a survey flight to the Philippines that he would recommend to his concern that regular service between Manila and Hong Kong be established, probably next year. This would be under the management of the Pan-American company itself.

ARMED ROBBERY CHARGE

Jury Unable To Agree.

NEW TRIAL ORDERED FOR WEDNESDAY

Before Mr. J. R. Wood, Acting Chief Justice, at the Criminal Sessions this morning, Wu Shu-wing, alias Wu Ah-tuen, appeared on remand charged with armed robbery, with others, at 275 Des Vaux Road, a haberdashery shop, on July 17.

The jury were unable to agree upon a verdict and a new trial was ordered for Wednesday next.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, Assistant Attorney General, prosecuted on behalf of the Crown. The jury consisted of Messrs. W. McLean (foreman), P. B. Barber, F. X. Gomes, V. T. Low, C. L. Rocha, A. W. Ingram and A. C. Gomes.

The accused is stated to be a fruit-stall holder on a Wuchow river steamer.

Mr. Fraser outlined the facts of the case, which, he said, showed that the affair was carefully planned and ruthlessly executed. After entering the shop in the early hours of the morning and subduing the inmates with a threat to ignite kerosene which had been poured over them, the robbers ransacked the floor and decamped with jewellery and cash valued at nearly $11,000. Seven men in all are said to have taken part in the crime.

Chau Yui-tung, a woman inmate, said that the prisoner held a revolver to her throat and a knife to the back of her neck to induce her to keep silent. The robbers tied up all the folks, her husband and his concubine, afterwards covering them up and pouring kerosene over them. On Wednesday last, Lau Hung-yuet, a former fooki of the shop, pleaded guilty to a charge of complicity and was sentenced to five years' hard labour.

TSUN WAN TAXI ROBBERY.

European Gaoled And Fined $15.

At the Kowloon Magistracy on Saturday, George Clarke, 21, the European accused of having assaulted and robbed a taxi-driver on Tuesday night near Tuen Wan, was sentenced by Mr. Wynne-Jones to four months' imprisonment for the robbery and fined $15, in default 14 days' gaol, for the assault.

Two Indians, stated to have been with Clarke, were also arrested, but no charge has as yet been brought against them.

Inspector Darling, prosecuting, said that he had made inquiries, and was satisfied that defendant had never been on the s.s. Glenearn, as he claimed to have been. The local agents did not know anything about him.

Clarke had nothing to say.

HEROIC TALE OF THE SEA

Norwegian Ship Meets Typhoon.

CHIEF OFFICER'S ACTION
SAVES SHIP

Terribly battered in a gale encountered off the coast of Hainan, her foredeck smashed, railings twisted, and her rudder bar broken, the Norwegian steamer Havdrot was towed into Hong Kong early on Saturday morning by the tug Henry Keswick.

The ship was only saved from destruction by the splendid seamanship of Captain Lovik and the heroic action of the Chief Officer, Mr. K. Naess, who, working for an hour and a half, mostly under water, succeeded in fixing a shackle and two steel hawsers to the swinging rudder, thus enabling the ship to be steered.

The Havdrot has been employed on the Bangkok-Hong Kong run for many years, and is well-known on the China Coast. She was built in 1916 at Newcastle by Wood, Skinner and Co., Ltd. Of 1,188 tons, gross, she is owned by the A/B Hav (Helmer Staube and Co.) of Norway. The local agents are Messrs. Karlsson Larsen and Company.

Wong Fook, who was banished less than a week ago, was sentenced to 7 months' hard labour by Mr. Balfour at the Central Magistracy this morning for returning to the Colony.

To-Day's Short Story.

MIKE FLANNERY, DETECTIVE

By Ellis
Parker Butler

MIKE FLANNERY, the Westcote agent of the Interurban Express Company, bent down and picked up the wicked-looking automatic pistol that lay on the floor by his desk. He shook his head disapprovingly as he looked at the weapon.

"That's a bad wan," he said, wiping his forehead with the creckled back of his left hand. "Twould make a hole in a man big enough for a squirl to go through. Them guys was mean lads, I'm tel'ing ye!"

He said this to no one in particular, because he was alone in the room. Mr. Flannery had just had his first experience with masked robbers, and while he had been able to preserve the company's money intact he had been wounded in the short but violent battle with the intruders. The four knuckles of his right hand were skinned.

"Bandits! In Westcote! Think of that now!" he said as he laid the deadly weapon on top of his desk. "What will the world be comin' to next, I wonder? Anyhow—"

Hanging from his right wrist by its leather thong was the short butt of a billiard cue with which he had valiantly defended the property of the Interurban Express Company. Mike Flannery seated himself at the desk and hung the club on the nail at the end of the desk where he always kept it. He looked at the abrasions on his knuckles and frowned at them, and reached for a dog-eared and greasy small book in the upper right-hand pigeon-hole of his desk.

"Bandits—hold-up men—robbers—thieves," he said as he ran a finger down the index of the book of rules. "B for bandits—and none of them. H for hold-up—and not a blamed sign of it there. R for robbers. 'Rates—Re-claim-ations, 'Robbery, in case of,' page sixty-two. 'In case of robbery or hold-up the agent will telephone company headquarters immediately.' An' why not?"

He reached for the telephone. "Hello! Give me sivil-six-four-nine Placid. Sivil-six-four-nine—Hello! Is that—Hello! Give me sivil—Is that the Interurban Express Company? This is Flannery, the agent, at Westcote—Hello!"

He listened, looking at his knuckles. He put the first knuckle to

BAG SNATCHERS BUSY.

Two Unemployed Men
Gaoled.

Chang Sing-man, unemployed, was sentenced to three months' hard labour by Mr. Balfour at the Central Magistracy this morning, for stealing a handbag from a married woman, Wong Tsui-chun.

Complainant was walking along Upper Lascar Row when defendant crept up behind her and snatched the bag from under her left arm.

She gave chase and he was finally caught by a Chinese near the Central Theatre and handed over to an Indian Warder.

School Teacher Robbed.

Snatching a handbag containing $85 from Miss Angell Mo Ting-yuen, a Canton school teacher, an unemployed Chinese, Leung Ming, ran into the grounds of the Government Civil Hospital yesterday, where he was chased by the hospital cook, Alan Khan, and arrested. Pleading guilty at the Central Police Court this morning, he was sentenced to six months' hard labour.

MR. LIN SEN VISITS FUKIEN.

No Political Object
In View.

Foochow, To-day. Mr. Lin Sen, Chairman of the Nanking National Government, is proceeding to Fukien, his native Province, on board the gunboat Yinghai. He is expected to arrive here this afternoon.

His visit is said to be of a normal nature, according to his spokesman. —Central News Agency.

his mouth. He licked all four knuckles, as a dog licks a wound. "Hello! This is Mike Flannery, at Westcote," he said suddenly as a sweet voice greeted him over the telephone wire. "Rule three hundred and sivil, page sivilty-two—This is Flannery. At Westcote. On Long Island. On page sivilty two, close to the top of the page—Av course I want th' Interurban Express Company! I'm tel'ing ye the rules, in th' book on page sivilty. Listen, you! Tha' was robbers here—well, give me him, then."

Mr. Flannery waited a minute longer with the receiver held to his ear.

"I'm sorry," said the sweet voice of the headquarters operator. "Mr. Biedermann is in conference."

"Listen, darling," Mike Flannery said with equal sweetness. "This is Mike Flannery, th' agent of th' Interurban Express Company, at Westcote, if ye ever heard of it, and there been robbers here. Hold-up gintilmin, so to say. The rules, in th' book, on page sivilty-two, says 'Robbery, in case of'—"

TO-MORROW'S STORY

To-morrow's story will be
"Jukes," by Bill Adams.

"Oh! Robbery?" said the sweet voice. "I'll connect you with Mr. Pellick, Legal Department. One minute, please!"

Mr. Flannery leaned his head on his hand and looked sideways up at the ceiling. He waited. He exercised his face by raising and lowering his eyebrows. He licked his knuckles again.

"Hello!" said a male voice over the wire. "Pellick speaking; Law Department—Interurban Express. Who's speaking?"

"The' been robbers," said Mike Flannery. "Mike Flannery, Westcote, is tel'ing ye. Two of thim—hold-up men and bandits, like, an' by Rule Sivilty-two, I'm wrong!" "Look here! What are you talking about?"

"Tis not Rule Sivilty-two, said Mike Flannery pleasantly. "'Tis Rule Three Hundred and Sivil. 'Tis th' page that is sivilty-two."

"What are you talking about? Who is this talking?"

"This is Mike Flannery, Express agent for th' Interurban Express Company, at Westcote, on Long Island, in th' State of New York," said Mr. Flannery patiently but with an air of resignation. "The' was robbers here. In th' office. Two of thim. Wan! Two! A pair. Robbers. An' th' book of rules says—"

"Oh! Robbers!" exclaimed Mr. Pellick. "Why didn't you say so! One minute, now. Westcote, Long Island? You say your name is Flannery?"

"Flannery." "Flannery? All right, Flannery; I'll have two of our best men out there in half-an-hour. Don't touch a thing; don't move anything. Where are you now, Flannery?"

"In me chair, sir, by me desk; in front of th' desk as ye may say. Holdin' th' telephone to me ear, like."

"Stay there. Don't touch a thing. I'm sending Dallas and Kerlong out there by car. Time is the important factor in these matters, Fogarty. And not to disturb any clues. How long ago did—but never mind that. I'm putting Dallas and Kerlong on this case; you do what they tell you."

Flannery heard the receiver click on to its hook at the other end of the line, and he hung up. He looked at his knuckles again, touching them gently with his left forefinger. He felt in his coat pocket for his pipe; then, by holding the other coat pocket open with his left hand, he managed to get his package of tobacco without hurting his knuckles. He filled and lighted his pipe and put his feet on his desk and leaned back in his chair. He had half-an-hour to wait for Mr. Dallas and Mr. Kerlong, the Interurban's star investigators.

Before the car arrived Mr. Flannery heard the distant and conspicuous scream of its horn, and the car stopped in front of the office with a shriek of its brakes. Mr. Dallas and Mr. Kerlong leaped from the car and fairly ran across the walk. They bolted into the office and confronted Mr. Flannery.

"You, Flannery?" demanded Mr. Dallas.

LINCOLNS LUCKY TO BEAT THE CLUB 3 TO 1FINE HALF BACK TRIO
SHINEOMAR LEADS YOUNG
INDIANS TO 2ND WIN

HO KA KUEN'S LAPSE

(By Outside Left).

Although the Lincoln's continue in winning vein, their victory over the Club in the First Division at Sookunpoo on Saturday was by no means a meritorious one, for on the run of the play the Club should have emerged easy victors.

Both McGuinness and Ridley proved themselves the most dangerous of the Lincoln's forwards. Higgins and the wingers, Baldry and Hocquard, being too closely watched to be in the limelight.

S. Strange, the Club's skipper, played an outstanding game in defence, and was well supported by Hynes, whose determined tackling and speed enabled him to spoil Hocquard's efforts to flash across his accurate centres.

Another outstanding player deserving of praise was L. G. Robertson, who, although really a Rugby player, displayed excellent talent at wing half, his speed and tackling being superb during the second half.

H.K. LADIES
BEAT "Y" BY
3 CLEAR GOALSLosers Recover Well
In Second Half.

WEAK CENTRE FORWARD

Playing their first match of the season, the Hong Kong Ladies, Caer Clark Cup champions, beat the "Y" Ladies by three goals to nil on the Sookunpoo ground on Saturday. Miss B. Pope was unable to play owing to illness, and her position at centre-half was taken by Mrs. D. Robertson.

The Hong Kong side asserted an early superiority, completely dominating the first half of the game when they scored their three goals through Miss Bonnar, Miss Churchill and Miss Dalziel.

The "Y" Ladies made a remarkable recovery in the second half, and, although they failed to reduce the score, they made many good attempts, and on the whole enjoyed the better of the exchanges.

The "Y" forwards lacked the combination and shooting ability of their opponents. The two wing players did very good work but lacked support. Miss Blackmore, at inside right was outstanding in the second half but would have done better at centre-forward where Miss Kuelpis did not combine well.

Miss S. Dalziel shines worked very hard against the fast Hong Kong forwards, while Miss Fovier at back proved very useful with her hard clearing shots, but she made frequent mistakes in attempting first timers. The team's weakness lay in their inability to remain in position, frequent passes from both wings often being wasted.

Miss Wallace played a very fine game for the Hong Kong Ladies, as did Miss K. Robertson and Mrs. Thorpe at back. Miss Bird in goal brought off brilliant saves in the second half. The forward line combined beautifully and their fast and accurate shooting proved very deadly. The Hong Kong Ladies showed quite clearly that they will probably retain the Caer Clark Cup again this year.

The teams were as follows:—H. K. Ladies: M. Bird, K. Robertson, P. Thorpe, M. Wallace, Mrs. D. Robertson, C. H. Lowe, E. Bell, J. Dalziel, E. Bonnar, J. Churchill, S. Leung, "Y" Ladies: M. J. Waller, M. Gardiner, A. Fowler, B. Hollings, R. Dalziel and B. Blumenthal; O. Dalziel, B. Blackmore, G. Kuelpis; P. McGowan and O. Bayne; Reserves: M. Smith.

Skinner led his halves well, although Andy Duncan was never really at home on the ground. He however managed to keep Baldry in hand.

Had Fowler taken things into his own hands instead of sending in neat centres to his leader, the result might have been reversed.

Fowler's goal, the Club's only point, was a beauty, being in the net before Heath could move.

Fowler's only fault is that he appears to be too languid—a little quickening up of his play would improve things considerably.

Howe played a fine game, though he missed several sitters. He received very little support from E. Strange, who, as I have already maintained, tries to diddle the whole of the opposing backs by himself.

On Saturday he was wasted and was never in position for a centre from the right wing, several of which came over for someone to improve on.

Forwell played a splendid game in the Club goal, and it was through no fault of his that the Lincoln's scored on three occasions.

Two of the goals were impossible for any keeper to stop, while he was unslighted by his backs for the third goal.

Dominy was entirely out of the picture, except in the latter stages of the game when he made several good clearances.

A word must be said for the Lincoln's halves, Dudley, Cork and Bliss, who played a splendid game and fed their forwards with superb ground passes.

The majority of the Lincoln's defence-work throughout the game was carried out with their hands. This was most noticeable in the second half.

The fast forwards of the Young Indians proved too much for the Kowloon defence, particularly in the first half when the Indians led by 4 goals to 1. After the interval Kowloon made positional changes and played better to score twice.

A. M. Omar was again the outstanding forward, making some fine openings for his inside men, and the speed of Yusuf on the wing was too much for Tillery and Winch.

For Kowloon, G. White and Boyles played well.

Timberlake, the Kowloon pivot, worked well throughout in the game against St. Joseph's, and Bliss, although late in starting, put in some nice work in shadowing B. Gosano and effectively spoiling many of that player's movements with his wing partner.

The efforts of the Kowloon forwards in the majority of cases were nullified by the sound defence of the Saints. A. V. Gosano being again brilliant. In the second half, however, the Kowloon forwards became more dangerous, and Elliot and Lewis tested R. Marques with several well-placed shots, which he did well to save.

Although goals were fairly plentiful in the Second Division game between South China and the Navy, defences on the whole were sound and the forwards had a rough passage in breaking through.

Hui Yew-kwong, the South China half, had a good afternoon. On several occasions he had the Navy defence well beaten only to lose his scoring opportunities by trying to walk the ball into the net.

Allport and his Navy halves played heroically, but the Chinese had no great difficulty in bringing the ball into their half, Thompson and Guy being the main obstacles to the South China forwards.

Birmingham, the Artillery's junior leader, showed good ball distribution against the Borderers, but made few attempts to tackle an opponent when the occasion demanded. He was slow in front of goal.

In this game Wood, the Gunner's custodian saved a hot shot from Forley who drove his penalty kick straight at the goalkeeper.

Ho Ka Kuen had a glorious opportunity to level the scores for the Athletic against the Navy, but he ballooned the ball over the bar when well positioned. The Navy won 6-4 and the Athletic sustained their third defeat.

The absence of Wroe from the Artillery's forward line caused a last-minute reshuffle and the introduction of Edmunds, who had already played in the Junior game, Allan was outstanding for the Gunners, while Gough and Britain combined well with Stevens for the Police. Channings was also prominent for the guardians of the law.

Although the Navy halves played heroically, but the Chinese

CRAIGENGOWER
WIN THE SPEY
ROYAL CUPFatal Error By Lapsley.

OMAR PLAYS BRILLIANTLY

(By SHORT HEAD.)

Craigengower were very fortunate to defeat Kowloon Docks by 6 shots in the Final Round of the Spey Royal Cup on the Civil Service Cricket Club green on Saturday.

The Kowloon Docks led convincingly until the second last head when Lapsley, the skip, in an attempt to draw to the jack knocked his No. 2's wood to give Craigengower 5 shots. This placed the Valley rink 22-18 in the lead and two points on the final head assured them of the game.

Settling down on the seventh head the Kowloon Docks maintained a useful lead until the 20th head, in spite of 5 shots by Craigengower on the eleventh head.

Omarr, the Craigengower skip was responsible for this large score with a successful drive which carried the jack to the ditch.

Following this head Craigengower slowly reduced the margin and were one point behind on the ninth head.

It was then that Lapsley, who had been playing brilliantly, made the fatal mistake which gave Craigengower the lead and cost the Kowloon Docks the match.

The Kowloon Docks won the Cup in 1930 and have been runners-up each year since then.

HOW THEY REACHED THE FINAL

Craigengower eliminated the Yacht Club, the Electric and the K.C.C. in their path to the Final, while the Docks beat the I.R.C., the Civil Service, and the Recreio, the holders.

For Craigengower, Omar, the skip, was outstanding. His brilliant work on the eleventh head gave his side the necessary encouragement at a critical stage.

Buchanan at No. 1 was not quite at home on the Civil Service green, but Brabury provided very steady, and gave nothing away. Beer was not up to his usual form, but sent down several very useful woods.

Lapsley and Ramsay were the outstanding men for the Docks, and, except for his mistake on the second last head, Lapsley proved a very shrewd skip. Ramsay, at No. 1, Docks played an inspired game and showed interplay form, his drawing on the jack being one of the main features of the game. Greig, although not brilliant, held his own against Brabury, but Brown was not at his best, many of his shots being short.

MR. DEITZ THROWN BY FAVOURITE

LT. WHINNEY WINS ON THE LOAFER

MR. LEO FROST LEADS JOCKEYS

MR. BENNY PROULX, who arrived back from Shanghai on Friday evening, rode a glorious race on Navy Hall to cause an upset in the first leg of the "double" at the Trafalgar Day Race Meeting at the Valley on Saturday. Only 88 of 1,247 backers were on him, and of these only 10 succeeded in spotting King's Parade (Mr. F. M. L. Soares) for the second leg. They were rewarded with $548.60 each.

A nasty spill occurred in the Australians race when Mr. Norman Deitz was thrown by Sunup, the favourite, but fortunately the rider was only shaken. He took out Fl Fa five races later, but was unplaced.

H.E. the Governor and Lady Peel arrived shortly after the Trafalgar Scurry which resulted in Lt. Whinney bringing The Loafer home to pay a win dividend of $70.50, the highest of the day.

Mr. Leo Frost, the champion jockey, was again the leading rider with two wins, a second, a third in six starts.

FAILURE AFTER 14 YEARS OF WORK

In a few days, when we have the report of the Committee of Three on the Assyrian problem (a Mexican, a Norwegian, and an Irish Free State Civil Servant permanently resident in Geneva), Iraq will be another.
The second lesson is that what is the business of 58 States is nobody's business. Prolonged association with League procedure has deprived even the 'most virile' of States of the power to act.
Countries must regain their power of national initiative. When international agreements are necessary there is no reason in common sense why every single member of the League should be asked for its concurrence. At Ottawa this country began to feel the faint stirrings of circulation in limbs that were fast becoming paralysed by "international co-operation." The sooner the process is continued the better.
In "War Memoirs," Mr. Lloyd George scathingly indicts the red tape of the Civil Service as "blindness." In 14 years the "League habit" degenerated into international blindness. It must be eradicated.

MIKE FLANNERY DETECTIVE

you an' us has got to work this together for the company, ain't we? We ain't got no need to get sore and all, you and us, when it's all for the company. Ain't that right, Mike?"

"Flannery to you, sir," said the express agent unyieldingly.

"Sure—Flannery!" said Mr. Kerlong. "We got it right, now, ain't we, Joe? Our little mistake, Joe; that's all, wasn't it?"

"Sure! We don't mean nothing, Flannery," agreed Mr. Dallas. "We got to get these robbers that's been robbing the Interurban all over the place. That's all, Flannery."

"We don't want to have to 'phone in to Pellick and say the agent here at Westcote ain't givin' us proper support, do we, Joe?" said Mr. Kerlong. "All we want is information, Flannery. You got to think how it looks, holdin' back information on us. Cripes! We don't want Pellick or nobody to think maybe we was standin' in with these stick-up guys because you hold back information on us. We don't want nobody to think that, do we, Joe?"

"All we want is to get the information so we can go out and get these stick-ups; that's all we want," said Mr. Dallas.

"Sure!" said Mr. Kerlong heartily, and with every evidence of friendly good nature. "That's all there is to it, Flannery. Now, about them gloves—did the little guy have gloves on?"

The express agent had returned to his chair.

"He did that," he admitted.

"No finger-prints," said Mr. Kerlong, and Mr. Dallas made a note of it in his little book. "No finger-prints on the gun, Joe."

Mike Flannery looked at his knuckles, which were now beginning to smart considerably. He had a feeling that he ought to go over to the drug store and get something to put on his knuckles. Usually when he barked himself the skin healed quickly, and he did not bother to do more than stick a piece of adhesive on the wound, but he had skinned his knuckles by hitting the taller bandit in the mouth. He had hit the bandit on the teeth with his knuckles, which was practically the same as if the bandit had bit his knuckles with his teeth. The teeth of a bandit might be poisonous.

"About them bandits—" he said.

"Wait a minute! Wait a minute!" said Mr. Kerlong, raising a silencing hand. "No finger-prints, Joe, on account of the bandits had gloves on. Did they both have gloves on?"

"Yes," said Mike Flannery, sinking back into his chair with a disheartened air. He crossed his hands on his stomach and looked down at his skinned knuckles.

"They had, but I did not have."

"All right! Both of them had gloves on, Joe. Now, how much dough did they get away with?"

"Not a cent!" said Mr. Flannery. "Divil a penny!"

"They didn't get anything, Joe," said Mr. Kerlong, informed Mr. Dallas.

"They got interrupted. Is that right, Flannery?"

"With a club," said Mike Flannery. "Bandits! I says 't' me, when I see them. 'Tis time to interrupt 'em! I says, 'or, sh'ud I telephone Mr. Pellick, I says, 'and desire him 't' send a pair of gentlemen from headquarters 't' interrupt 'em? What does 't' rules say? I says, 'Unfortunatly, I had no time 't' look in 't' book, so I grabbed me club and lit into 'em, thus interruptin' 'em. Mr. Kerlong, sir, 'He scared them off, Joe, before they got to 't' till,' explained Mr. Kerlong. "Did you give an alarm, Flannery?"

"I did not!"

"You didn't call the cops?"

"I did not!"

"You didn't go to the door and yell for help?"

"I did not!"

"These bandits—this Long and this Short—did they come in a car?"

"Now, be hanged if I didn't forget 't' ask them that 'wan'!" said Mike Flannery. "We was in a sort of a rush," he explained, "an' did not have time for interdin' converstation, my attention bein' occupied with th' job av interruptin' 'em, and thim dislikin' 't' be interrupted. The next time I will raynember 't' ask how they come."

Mr. Kerlong gave Mr. Dallas a glance. He poked his massive jaw out farther than before. He had a faint impression that Mr. Flannery was playing with him. He did not like it.

"Look here, now; I want this straight—were there any hold-up guys here at all? Is this some gag you're tryin' to put over on us? What's this all about, anyway? Did anybody try to hold you up or did they?"

"They did!" said Mr. Flannery positively.

"Just like you've been telling us!"

"'Tis th' truth, th' whole truth, and nothin' but th' truth," said Mr. Flannery. "Two of 'em."

"Well, Joe," Mr. Kerlong said, "I guess he's givin' 't' to us straight. How was they dressed, Flannery?"

"The little small fella was in dark clothes, like brown, it might be, an' th' other wan was in grey. Caps th' both of 'em had. But if—"

"Caps, Joe. Grey caps?"

"No doubt of that, sir, but if 't' was a hard enough job, if we had all the facts the 's, grabbin' off two slick guys like them. It ain't so easy goin' out an' pickin' up two smart fellas like them. You guys think us detectives has a cinch. What's that?"

Mr. Kerlong turned his head sharply. What had attracted his attention was a sound like that of a heavy sack of sand falling on the floor. It came from the rear room. Mr. Dallas also looked in the direction from which the sound came, and he, too, said, "What's that?"

"I shouldn't wonder," said Mike Flannery, "if 'twas thim two bandits I locked in th' broom closet after I interrupted 'em. Had a thim."

REDS WATERING DOWN TO GREY

Pretty Young Women
Enlist As Spies.

Canton, Oct. 17.

The Reds in the Hunan and Kiangsi districts are now turning
"grey," according to a telegraphic message from Gen. Ho Chien, Government of Hunan, who asserts that the Communists are sending a large number of secret service agents to the areas held by Red suppression armies to act as spies.

They are under orders from the Kiangsi Soviet Government to establish "grey" organisations for carrying out plots to buy over Government troops and arrange coups against Government commanders.

Most of the members of the "grey" fraternity, including some pretty young women, belong to the Communist Dare-to-Die Corps and their mission is to pretend to surrender to the Government forces in order to be able to work among the troops.—Reuter.

U. S. HEADED IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION.

President Roosevelt declared that he was not satisfied with the rise in prices of farm products.

"It is our policy to increase and extend the rise to products which, so far, have felt no benefit, and if it cannot be done one way, we will do it another," he said.—Reuter.

Carnera Wins

Carnera crowned his "Five Year Plan," commenced in 1928, with a sensational win over Jack Sharkey, whom he knocked out in six rounds
to win the world title at Madison Square Garden. After that fight he announced that he would embark on another such plan to defend his title.

He has been beaten by Larry Gains, the Canadian negro, on points, and efforts are now being made to get the two men together, following the negro's challenge for the title.

Uzvedun, who is new approaching the veteran stage, lost and won his two fights against Phil Scott, then
British champion, three years ago.
He has victories over Don McCor-kindale, the South African champion, George Cook, the Australian, Tom Heaney, and Max Baer, who is now in the running for a title bout.

ESTHONIA TO HAVE DICTATORSHIP

Reval.

A long step towards a dictatorship in Esthonia has been sanctioned by plebiscite. An overwhelming majority has voted in favour of greatly extended powers for the head of the state and a reduction in the number of members of Parliament from 100 to 50.—Reuter.

TREASURE HUNT IN THE COCOS.

Ex-Public School Boys
Going To South Seas.

£12,000,000 HIDDEN AFTER
1824 MUTINY.

London.

The motor yacht Romance sailed on October 17 from Pembroke dock for the Cocos Islands, in the South
Seas, in quest of hidden gold.

Treasure, reputed to be worth £12,000,000, is said to have been hidden in the island in 1824 by the crew of a ship after a mutiny.

Captain Max Stanton, leader of the expedition, is hopeful of locating the treasure. He was chief officer of the Mawson during the Antarctic Expedition of 1930-31.

The crew of the Romance consists of twelve ex-public school boys.—Reuter.
